I think it my duty, therefore, to assure your Excellency that the Union Pacific Railroad is at least equal to any of these other lines in construction, appointments and permanent improvements, and that you ascertain the thoroughness and excellence of this work by reference to Generals Grant, Sherman and Sheridan, who lately passed over the line. I can also furnish the names of many of the most eminent practical railroad men in the country to corroborate these statements from personal knowledge. I respectfully request that the commissioners be instructed to include all the roads in the examination, and to report in detail on the comparative qualities of each. To any test this road shall cheerfully submit, only asking to be protected from unnecessary delays, which are as hostile to the interests of the country and the safety of the settlements along our route as they would be unjustly expensive to ourselves.

Commercial Convention to be Held in Norfolk-Direct Trade With Europe Proposed. NORFOLK, Oct. 12, 1868.

The most extensive preparations are being completed for the reception of the delegates to the great Commercial and Direct Trade Convention to be held here on Wednesday next. The Boards of Trade here on Wednesday next. The Boards of Trade respectively of St. Louis, Louisville, Memphis, Nashville and other cities will be present, over 2,500 delegates are expected, and the meeting will be the largest ever held in Norfolk. The development of the resources of this city, the establishment of internal lines of communication with the Great West, and direct trade by steam with Europe are the objects to be achieved by the convention. Numbers have already arrived, while to-morrow will bring the entire delegations in special trains. A grand pyrotechnic display will be given in the harbor, the fire companies will parade with torches and the city will be immirated. On Friday the various delegations will be taken round the harbor in a fleet of steamers. The best results are anticipated.

Last evening, about eight o'clock, John J. White, esiding at the corner of 104th street and Fifth ave nue, committed spicide at his house by shooting himseif through the newd. He used an ordinary pistol, and from the position of the wound evidently intended that the shot should be fatal. White died almost instantly. The coroner was notified, AMUSEMENTS.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.-Last night this fashionable an elegant house was as staid and sober as if Biack-Crookism and opera boufe had never dispiaced the legitimate drama. Legs are no longer trumps, and Edwin Forrest reigns supreme. It was, however, exceedingly difficult to believe one's self in Niblo's. The audience was large and sympathetic; but the feeling seemed to be general that the thing was quiet and a little slow. This feeling is not unnatural in the circumstances; but the managers have the consolation of knowing that it will wear away, and that with Forrest as a star it will not affect the receipts. Of King Lear we have little more affect the receipts. Of Ring Lear we have little more to say than that the witty, generous, noble, rash, unreasonable old King was delineated to perfection. Mr. Forrest's Lear, which has long been known to the New York public, is a careful and able study and presents many points of peculiar excellence. Through and through the piece he looks "every inch a king" and such a king as Lear. It is, perhaps, as good a Lear as has been seen on the stage since the days of the elder Kean. If not the best it is entitled to rank with the best since that great master passed away. Edgar was well played by George H. Clarke. The subordinate parts, indeed, one all all, were well sustained. The scenery was remarkably good, the music was appropriate, and altogether the piece was put upon the stage in a manner worthy of the well known skill and enterprise of the managers.

Academy of Music.—Fanny Janauschek, in her ACADEMY OF MUSIC.-Fanny Janauschek, in grand rôle of Mary Stuart last night, had a finuse, an appreciative house, a delighted house and a great success. She is a magnificent reader and a royal actress. The first act, to one unaccustomed to the harsh and grating German tongue, drags rather heavily; and yet even the German, as rendered by Janauschek, rapidly grows upon us till it become as musical as the language of Ristori, as, for instance, in this sublime passage where the unhappy Queen of Scots speaks of the injustice of

A splendid piece of queenly dignity and indigmation. But when we reach the meeting in the third ton. But when we reach the meeting in the third ton.

tion. But when we reach the meeting in the third act between Mary and Elizabeth, and the insulting act between Mary and Elizabeth, and the insulting haughtiness and heartlessness of the bloody Henry's remorseless daughter becomes intolerable, then it is that the fage of the royal Stuart carries the house by storm, as it finally drives her vanquisined torturer from the stage:—

Mania A ton Zora glibend, doch mit cher clein Warde). Ich habe menschlich, jugenallich gefehlt—

We say that the Mary Stuart of Janauschek was Anna von Bolen das Schaffot bestiegen.

We say that the Mary Stuart of Janauschek was a spiendid performance, and we can say, too, that she was well supported by a company of accomplished artists. Had we the space we should like to speak of them in detail, but it must suffice that in their general excellent acting there were no defects which we could not overlook. Janauschek will appear tomorrow evening (first time in America) in her admirable role of Catharina the Second, Empress of Russia, when she will doubliess have a house even larger in numbers than that of last evening, from the newness of the subject in these latitudes.

WALLACK'S THEATRE—The week was inaugure.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—The week was inaugurated at this house last night by the production of Tom Taylor and Charles Reade's play of "Masks and Faces." It belongs to that class of plays which requires a good cast in order to render it even acceptable to a discriminating audience, and indeed the cast last evening was equal to these requirements. which he has already won an enviable distinction, invested it with all those little touches of art that invested it with all those little touches of art that have ever distinguished his playing of this his great-est representation. In the third act he was particularly good. Miss Eytinge's Peg Woffington was acceptably rendered. George Holland made his first appearance for the season, and received, as he invariably doss, a genial welcome. He essayed the part of Thomas Quinn, the manager, and although there is very little to do in the role what there is was done in his own characteristic style. The remainder of the cast was up to the mark, and the manner in which it was put on the stage was worthy of the theatre in which it was produced.

The OLYMPIC THEATRE.—Last evening Mr. George

THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, -Last evening Mr. George L. Fox's comic and spectacular pantomime "Humpty Dumpty entered upon its thirty-second week re-constructed, enlivened by fresh allusions to current events, and for the first time adding to its original attractions a grand Parisian ballet, in which Mile. Rita Sangali was supported by Miles. Setti, Kurtz, Pagani, Reimsberg, Madeline Negri, Rosina Negri, and the accomplished maître de battet, Mr. David Costa. Niblo's Terpsichorean delights have thus been revived at the Olympic. Neville's new song and chorus, "Hurrah for the National Game," won loud appliance from all the base ball players who happened to be present. Clown and Harlequin, Pantaloon and Columbine rejoiced in new and gay costumes. No reconstruction was requisite or possible for the inimitable and mirth provoking face which belongs to Fox alone. This great "comedian and pantonimists" has certainly never been surpassed in his impersonation of Clown. The transformation scene with which the pantonime concludes is extraordinarily brilliant. It is almost superfluous to say that the theatre was crowded with spectators, all of whom ceased to wonder at the prolonged success of "Humpty Dumpty," Long may it wave!

PIKE'S OPERA HOUSE-THE NEW DROP CURTAIN .-A private view of the new drop curtain painted by Mr. Francesco Angero, of this city, for Pike's Opera House was given last evening at the above establish ment before a large and select company. The new curtain represents the landing of Columbus in Amer-ica, and is forty-five feet wide by forty-two in length. It is painted in water colors and is unques-tionably one of the handsomest drop curtains in this or any other city. The figures are nicely or any other city. The figures are nicely grouped and are somewhat larger than life size, that of Columbus, the central figure, being seven feet high, while some indians in the foreground, on the left of the picture, reach the gigantic height of nine feet. The painting is from an original design by the artist, Mr. Francesco Angero, and represents Columbus on shore, surrounded by the officers and soldiers of the expedition, some of whom have prostrated themselves upon the earth, while another is in the act of kissing the hem of the garment of the great discoverer. Several Indians occupy the foreground, and their attitudes and the expression of their faces betoken amazement and fright. Columbus is dressed in a red siashed tunic and purple doublet and holds in his right hand a sword and in his left the banner of the expedition, which latter he holds slaft, as, with upturned face and a thankful expression of countenance, he takes possession of the country in the name of Spain. The painting, with the single exception of the heavy sea in the background, which is sitogether too solid, is pleasing to the eye. The treatment in general is excellent and the credit to the artist is proportionate.

German Stadt Theather—Mr. Hermann Hen-

GERMAN STADT THEATRE .- Mr. Hermann Hendrichs continues to draw crowded house at the Stadt theatre. Last night he appeared in one of his most popular characters, that of Goetz von Berlichingen. lie is a robust actor, something after the manner of He is a robust actor, something after the manner of Forrest, and attracts much the same sort of auditiones, with the difference that his are the German Lowery boys and Forrest's the American. Though is has not the classical or artistic flaish of many other celebrated actors he has great force and is really an excellent and effective performer. No better cyclence of this is wanted than the large and enthusiastic audience at the Stadt theatre last night. With the exception of one or two other other performers at this theatre he was not very well supported by the company. However, he is a star, with which the German Bowery people are well pleased and overlook everything class.

PARK THEATRE, BROOKLYN.—"The Red Scarf."

PARK THEATRE, BROOKLYN .- "The Red Scart." another sensational contribution from the pen of Augustin Daly, was presented for the first time at this establishment last evening, before a numerous audience. Indeed, when the curtain rose but few seats remained unoccupied, and some curiosity ap-peared to be manifested as to what new method of stage murder would be presented. The piece wa illustrative of the Aroostook and New England mill life. Opening with a conversation between Gail Barstow (W. Harris), a new settler in the Aroostook region, and Phil Barrett (F. Chippendale), a shrewd subjects generally, May Harrington (Miss S. Partington), the village coquette, appears upon the scene, firting with Harvey Thatcher (J. Little), a timber cutter and owner of the "Dark Falls" mills, together with being a hardened ruman. Gall is, of course, in love with May, who has also an admirer in the black love with May, who has also an admirer in the black. Thatcher. Being remarkably acute May overhears the rivais in an angry debate and at once thinks Gail the better of the two, whereupon Thatcher becomes feroclous and swears vengance. The wedding day upon which Gail and May are to be united arrives and attended by a crow. For happy villagers they are gally tripping to church, when poor Gail receives an anonymous scroll announcing his illuancial ruin, but extending a faint hope of rescue if he will meet some unknown person in a very dangerous locality. Without explanation he starts of, but not returning a search is instituted, when the red scarf given him by May at parting as a token of idelity is found upon the river bank, the inference being that he was drowned. Subsequently Thatcher, who had attended the wedding party and appeared quite at ease, is observed by May to dig up a bundle of clothes in the wood and proceed towards his mill, where Gail was bound and confined. After considerable tannting Gail proceeds to execute summary vengeance on his fettered rival by dragging him towards his sawing machine, pinioning him to it and setting the wheel in motion. This is the culiminating point. The saw does wonders, and just when about to make mines meat of Gail May, of course, appears, screams, stops the wheels and the captive is set free. Old Barrett fushes in, knows the situation at a giance and puts an end to Thatcher with a bullet, and the scene terminates without the teeth of the saw doing any particular damage. There is an absence of variety in the dialogue, which, to say the least, is commonplace, which the plect can scarcely be commended for originality. The characters, however, were well sustained and the plece presented with much smoothness and regularity.

Inspection and Muster of the Fifty-fifth Regi-

The Fifty-fifth regiment, N. G. S. N. Y., was in spected and mustered yesterday at Tompkins square. The day was very favorable and the attendance at the parade was consequently large. The regiment filed into the square shortly after two o'clock and very well and marched with steadiness. Line hav ing been formed the usual formalities of a review were gone through with. General Varian, the commandant of the Third brigade, of which the Fifty were gone through with. General Varian, the commandant of the Third brigade, of which the Fifty-fifth is a part, was present on the ground with his staff and a number of officers of the National Guard. As at the inspections of last week, which were fully described in the Herald, Brigatier General Henry Liebenau was the reviewing officer, and Major O. M. Wentworth inspected and mustered the regiment. Colonel Le Gal and Major Goldsmith were absent and Lieutenant Colonel W. B. Allen, who commanded, was the only field officer present. Under these circumstances a close criticism on the manceuvres of the regiment would be scarcely fair. It may, however, be stated that the line officers were negligent in their duties. The salutes in the march past were not given more correctly than those of the officers of the regiments inspected last week, and many mistakes were made, for which no excuse can be offered. The marker placed on the right flank of the regiment had to get out of the way of the advancing column, the head of which went tilt against him. The march past, however, was not had, and the officers and men have more reason to congrafulate themselves on yesterday's parade, than to feel discouraged. With careful training in the armory during the coming winter, and proper instruction of non-commissioned officers, the Fifty-fifth may reasonably expect to gain a name in the brigade for discipline and drill.

The muster of the regiment showed 225 rank and file present on the ground. The ceremonies were brought to a close by a general review in honor of the inspection. The trates of the regiment showed a file present on the ground. The ceremonies of review and inspection.

acted as adjutant during the ceremonies of review and inspection.

The Fifty-fifth is the sixth and last regiment of the Third brigade inspected. The total strength of the brigade present at muster and inspection was 2,024, as follows:—The First infantry, 263; the Seventh, 678; the Eighth, 407; the Ninth, 392; the Thirty-seventh, 263; and the Fifty-fifth, 325.

The entire First brigade will be inspected and mustered to-day at Franklin square.

General Reynolds and His Order Prohibiting an Election in Texas.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12, 1868. The Election in Texas-Correspondence Be-tween General Reynolds and the Democratic

The Secretary of War to-day received from Major General Reynolds, commanding the Fifth Military district, a copy of an address of the Central Executive Committee of the democracy of Texas to the people of that State, with a letter from the committee addressed to General Reynolds, dated September 28, 1868, and the reply of the latter, together with a copy of his order prohibiting the citizens of Texas from holding an election for President and Vice Presi-dent on the 3d of next month. The committee cite in their letter to General Reynolds the provision of the federal constitution in relation to the ap-pointment of Presidential electors and the law of Texas enacted in obedience there-to, passed March 15, 1813. They refer to the powers of the military commander over the affairs of Texas, as set forth in the Reconstruction act of March 2, 1867, and say that the people of Texas will with alacrity, peaceably and quietly, cast their votes for Presidential electors, should the election be ordered; and they respectfully request the General commanding to order the election, or in-struct the acting Governor to order it, as contemthe laws of Texas. But if the General commanding should decline to order the election the committee suggest that the laws of Texas as now in force are amply sufficient to authorize the people of the State to assemble at their usual voting places and appoint the necessary officers to conduct the election, and they proposed to issue a circular calling upon the people to hold an election on the 3d of November. The circular which the committee proposed to issue also cites the con-stitution of the United States and the laws of Texas in reference to Presidential electors, and states that the Governor has failed and refused to issue his proclamation for the appointment of electors. On the day after General Reynolds received these communications he repiled to the committee by enclosing his military order, dated September 29, setting forth the joint resolution of Congress of July 20, ex-cluding certain States from the electoral college, and oncluding as follows:—

No election for electors of President and Vice President of the United States will be held in the State of Texas on the 3d of November next. Any assemblages, proceedings or acts for such purpose are hereby prohibited, and all citizens are admonshed to remain at home or attend to their ordinary business.

In consequence of this order the committee on the 1st of October issued a circular publishing the correspondence with General Reynoids, and ending in the following words:—

You are prohibited from holding an election by an order from the military authority. Notwithstanding the great desire of the people to participate in the election, yet in view of that order, from the supreme acting authority of the State, it is your duty to abstain from so doing.

WASHINGTON, Oct 12, 1869. The President to-day, through the War Depart-ment, issued the following general orders for the information of army officers in regard to their powers to regulate elections in the Southern States. It is intended in part as a rebuke to General Reynolds, who has issued an order foroidding the citizens of Texas from holding an election for Presidential fectors. It will be recollected that that State and the States of Virginia and Mississippi have not yet been recognized by Congress in the admission of their senators and Representatives, and that Congress in July last passed an act in effect precluding the counting of their electoral votes:—

APPREHENSION OF TROUBLE IN WEST VIRGINIA.

(From the Washington correspondence of the Evening Post, October 12.]

General George H. Thomas arrived here this morning to attend the Dyer Court of Inquiry, not living received notice of its postponement. He will return at once and resume his command.

Governor Boreman, of West Virginia, arrived here this morning. He asks that troops may be sent to that State to preserve the peace at the coming election, as the disfranchised rebels in several counties threaten to vote at all hazards. He thinks the moral effect of a few companies of troops well distributed will be sufficient.

General Thomas says he cannot spare any troops from Tennessee.

Both gentlemen have been in conference with the military authorities this morning.
